

Friday Lunch with American photojournalist JENNIFER HUXTA

"A View from the Ground"

Jennifer Huxta will show photos and discuss her work in Africa as a photojournalist—from the Coup d'état in Burundi, to migrant camps in Rwanda or teaching photography to kids in Kenya and, most recently, to following women as they replant Uganda. Come share in her work, ask questions, share in her experiences.

Bring a sandwich along and practice your English!

20th September from 12.00pm to 2.00pm, room 201

BIO: Originally from Pennsylvania, Jennifer Huxta is a photographer and writer. She covered the recent crisis in Burundi, Pope Francis's visit to Kenya and Kenyan elections (2013 and 2017) as a stringer for Agence France-Presse (AFP). She has completed humanitarian photography assignments for NGOs and foundations throughout East/West/Central Africa, focusing on women's health, climate change, and youth unemployment. Her editorial work has appeared in the New York Times, Marie Claire, Le Monde, News Deeply, the Wall Street Journal, Washington Post, The Times, Le Journal du Dimanche, The Guardian, and the BBC. In 2015, she was certified in combat medical first aid by RISC (Reporters Instructed in Saving Colleagues). At A River Blue in Northern Uganda, she created a photo mural with young adults displaced by the Lord's Resistance Army conflict. Her journals explore the crossroads of reportage, drawing, collage, perception, memory and storytelling. She speaks fluent French, basic Italian, some Arabic and some Swahili. RISC-trained. Davis Fellow. IWMF Fellow Links to recent work: The Guardian: Deforestation from the Charcoal Trade in Northern Uganda, Marie Claire: Tree of Life, Moringa and agroforestry, NewsDeeply: Sex Workers Fighting HIV in Kenya, NewsDeeply: Volunteer Nurses Who Stepped Up to Heal Victims of Kenya's Police, www.jenniferhuxta.com